Brief Career History

In 1985 I started as a trainee for the BBC at Television Centre in London where I worked across the complete range of programmes being made there. I worked on many large studio shows including big Multi-Camera Studio Dramas (the BBC still did these in the late 80s), Light Entertainment, Sitcoms, Game-Shows, Sport, Music, News, Current Affairs and Children's TV. As well as working at the main BBC studios I also worked for their Outside Broadcast Department and gained valuable experience of covering large events such as Pop Concerts, Sporting and National Events. I then had an attachment to the BBC Film Unit before returning to Television Centre where I was attached to TV Post Production for about a year. After that I had a brief spell back in the studios before working for the News and Features department where I travelled over the UK and Europe as the Recordist part of a 2 man PSC/ENG crew. After doing this for a couple of years I went back to Television Centre from where we also serviced the BBC's Elstree studio crewing requirement. I continued to work for the BBC, alternating between Television Centre and Elstree, until the mid 90s when I left to become freelance.
